This publication is in memory of Waltenia Taylor “Miss Tina”, a beloved IPH employee and front line hero.
2020 proved to be full of challenges; yet it was also enlightening. With the confidence and support of the community, IPH kept its doors open and remained committed to keeping staff, guests, and our community safe and informed. While reflecting on this past year, several qualities and attributes of our team came to light that were central to the success we had in navigating such extreme and unprecedented circumstances:

Flexibility: Because IPH serves the most vulnerable members of the community, it was critical that our shelters and supportive services remain accessible; however, accomplishing this took flexibility and creativity to ensure the safest and healthiest environments possible while still providing essential resources.

Self-awareness: As the Black Lives Matter movement and racism became important parts of our daily dialogue, our teams looked inward at our policies and practices to ensure we are making every effort to promote a diverse and inclusive culture.

Perseverance: While the IPH team is experienced at handling challenges and crises, the past year was unlike any other, and it was unique in that it affected our teams personally as well as professionally. Despite facing their own challenges at home, our team continued showing up to support one another and ensure our programs were staffed and our guests supported. Our team recognized that their presence was important for not only ensuring safety but also for promoting consistency and stability for our guests.

Appreciation: 2020 shined a brighter light on the members of our team who were relied upon to be onsite every day, assisting and supporting our guests while many of us transitioned to working offsite to reduce the numbers of staff in our buildings. Our direct support staff, case managers, facilities team, administrative/program assistants, and kitchen staff, have been a steady force and are the true heroes within our agency.

Compassion: Our team never lost sight of the fact that, amidst the challenges and uncertainty we were all facing, those we serve were impacted in even greater ways by having the added instability of homelessness and few or no support networks on which to lean. It was this understanding that led our teams to continue providing support with great patience, empathy, and without judgement.

Our community has been a strong, generous force that has allowed us to continue opening new doors. We have felt your support every step of the way, and we are more grateful than ever that you have made the choice to partner with us as we continue serving those who need us the most.

Sincerely,

[Signatures]
Snapshot of IPH

While the world faced unprecedented challenges last year, largely in thanks to supporters like you, IPH persevered and continued to deliver critical services to those in need.

Some highlights of 2020 included:

- All programs remained open. Although the operations of many facilities had to be altered for safety, critical services were available for all who needed them.

- While many organizations were forced to close or suspend programs, IPH grew and acquired a new 11-bed emergency shelter on Morton Avenue in Albany.

- All 104 IPH staff members held their jobs. No furloughs or downsizing was necessary. In fact, IPH’s payroll grew as new positions and programs were added.

- A total of 2,249 individuals and families were impacted by one or more IPH services last year.

"During one of IPH’s most challenging years, IPH’s budget increased from $3,800,000 to over $5,000,000. Programs were acquired and staff members were added in order to handle the increased need for services and growth that we experienced.”
During this past year and during the Covid-19 pandemic IPH filled gaps in services while simultaneously focusing on front line staff. This effort allowed IPH to continue helping homeless and low-income individuals stay safe and achieve goals.”

Christine McDonough, Finance Director

"Because IPH serves many of the most vulnerable members of the community, it was important that those who were homeless had a safe, clean, supportive places to be, both during the day and at night. To that end, IPH shelters and Community Connections remained open, with services shifting to focus primarily on ensuring guests were healthy, safe, and had access to essential resources such as food, showers, laundry, and emotional support.”

Kristen Giroux, LMSW, Deputy Director

IPH's Emergency Shelter Services offer safe and supportive options for individuals experiencing homelessness. IPH’s shelter model provides flexible services to meet immediate needs, with an emphasis on long-term stability and success. IPH recognizes that shelter is not a destination, but a process to help individuals resolve their housing crises.

Guests in shelter settings meet regularly with case managers who assist with obtaining housing, finding employment, accessing healthcare, and setting up other services that support guests after discharge.

For the past year, we have had to get creative with keeping guests involved with their various appointments, as many turned virtual. From doctor appointments to behavioral health meetings to virtual tours of apartments and assisted living facilities, our guests had to utilize technology and platforms that they were not familiar with to participate in these appointments.

We utilized laptops and freed up offices to set our guests up with Zoom and give them as much privacy as possible. In a pinch, some guests were able to use their phones in a quiet corner of the shelter to attend their meetings!

IPH’s Community-Based Services provide community members with access to vital resources during weekday daytime hours.

All services are free of cost and easy to utilize, including daily meals, clothing pantry, laundry, mailbox and storage service, health-related education, care, and support, employment assistance, general case management, and more.

Of those, approximately half were homeless and residing in a shelter or on the street, and the other half were housed in the community but in need of additional resources or support to maintain their housing.

Tami is always a helpful resource to guests and their healthcare needs. Last year, she was a critical link to information regarding COVID-19 updates, precautions, symptoms, testing, and vaccination, among other daily duties at Healthy Connections sponsored by MVP Health Care.

Tami M.,
Healthy Connections Coordinator
Typical Journey Through Healthy Connections

1. Guest is homeless and has no insurance
2. Guest visits Tami to treat a headache and small wound.
3. Tami learns guest has no insurance or primary doctor
4. Tami links guest with an insurance provider and books an appointment with a primary doctor
5. Guest is prescribed medication from primary doctor and Tami arranges for medications to be safely delivered to Healthy Connections
6. While picking up medications the guest decides to get a COVID vaccine at a pop-up clinic hosted by Healthy Connections

“For a program designed to bring together community members, service providers, volunteers, and staff under one roof, the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic proved challenging for Community Connections.

At times, it felt as if keeping the doors open was too great a risk, but at the end of every conversation, it was decided to do just that: ensure Community Connections could remain a safe place where those in need could turn, especially in the light of added stressors brought out by the pandemic.”

Albany Ambassadors Employment Program
Hospitality-focused employment and support

*Due to COVID-19, traditional hospitality employment opportunities for the Albany Ambassadors have been suspended. However, IPH has been able to employ five Ambassadors in other capacities to maintain their income and employment.
Last year, IPH housed 33 individuals and 10 families

Through IPH Housing, permanent, affordable, supportive housing options are available to homeless individuals and families. With a housing-first philosophy, IPH is committed to removing barriers to housing and understands that individuals and families are better able to receive support and find success when they have an apartment or residence of their own.

IPH’s housing model identifies individuals and families who are living with a disability, including severe mental illness, chronic substance use, chronic illness, or physical impairments. Many have been chronically homeless and have lacked consistent supports or resources to achieve and maintain stability on their own. Once housed, tenants receive rental assistance along with person-centered supportive services that prioritize client choice, empathy, and optimism.

Over the next few years, IPH Housing is positioned to add 20 additional units for individuals and families.

Total units include both IPH-owned units and IPH-supported units. Supported units are not owned by the agency; rather, IPH provides rental assistance and support to tenants living in the community.

Fifteen months ago, Ashley opened the door to her own apartment. She and her son were in a family shelter before securing permanent, affordable housing within IPH Housing. Ashley has since found employment, counseling, and childcare for her son.

Guests like Ashley enjoy independent living and are assisted by Case Managers that provide support towards personalized goals including employment, health, education, and socialization.

IPH’s innovative and supportive approach leads to higher tenant retention rates and improved stability for guests within IPH Housing.
